What happens if you don't comply with this Code of Conduct?

It is a condition of ongoing membership with SCPD (as an individual member, teacher) that you comply with this Code of Conduct. Failure to meet the minimum standards of behaviour outlined here might have a range of consequences, including:

- a) You might be issued with a formal warning or reminder about appropriate conduct;
 - b) You might be asked to issue an apology to another person, if your inappropriate conduct has affected them negatively;
 - c) You might be removed from a position with APDA (for example, a role as an official or volunteer);
 - d) You might be excluded from APDA events, including competitions (either as a spectator or as a competitor);
 - e) In the most serious of cases, your registration with APDA might be suspended or terminated, in accordance with the Individual Member Rules or Teachers Rules, as relevant.
- Other consequences may be applied, depending on the nature and seriousness of the matter and the impact on APDA and its members.

Note: It is important to remember that, if you are a parent or guardian responsible for the registration of a member under the age of 18, your conduct might result in sanctions for your child. For example, if you demonstrate inappropriate behaviour towards others at SCPD or APDA events, both you and your child may be excluded from events or competitions.

How does SCPD decide whether there has been a breach of the Code of Conduct, and how does SCPD decide what to do if there is a breach?

A complaint or allegation of inappropriate behaviour can be made in accordance with the SCPD Dispute Resolution Policy, and any complaints or allegations will be dealt with in accordance with that policy. The Dispute Resolution Policy sets out how a matter will be investigated, what you would be told while a matter is under investigation (if you are the subject of a complaint or allegation), and how a matter might be resolved (noting the potential consequences outlined at rule CC6 in this policy).

It is important to note that, wherever this Code of Conduct or the Dispute Resolution Policy require decisions about whether or not behaviour is appropriate, and what sanction to apply for breaches, the SCPD Executive and Committee will make decisions that are considered to be in the best interests of SCPD as a whole. The Executive and Committee have discretion to take into account whatever information is considered necessary to support a decision being made in the best interests of SCPD.
